

UNIVERSITY OF ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES,
SUNYANI, GHANA
SCHOOL OF SCIENCES
COMMITTEE FOR HUMAN RESEARCH AND ETHICS

The University Community is by this notice informed that in line with the University's research ethics policy an Ethical Review Board the Committee for Human Research and Ethics" has been formed at the School of Sciences.

The Committee for Human Research and Ethics (CHRE) accepts applications for review of life-based research protocols usually pertaining to, but not limited to, the life sciences. For the avoidance of doubt, this includes all research that poses "more than minimal risk" to living subjects. In practical terms studies that involve "more than minimal risk", and therefore require ethical review, may include: studies where the intention is to submit findings for publication in journals, oral presentations, books, web-pages, and other media, or as part of coursework; studies involving the collection or analysis of data that could be used to identify participants (including email addresses or other contact details); physical contact with participants; any risk of discomfort or inconvenience to participants; any risk of psychological distress to participants or their families; participants recruited from vulnerable groups, in particular children and those whose capacity to consent to participation may be challengeable because they have a temporary, fluctuating, or permanent impairment in, or disturbance of the functioning of the mind or brain; data collection that will be undertaken overseas. If the study contains any of these elements, then prospective researchers are advised to seek ethical review of study protocols from the Committee ahead of time.
